Image editing in Photoshop is done through layers in a way analogous to many other graphics programs. The concept of layers is very basic and straightforward, but the way that layers are used to create and edit images provides a powerful way of manipulating images. A layer is a transparent image, usually a photo, that can contain other layers of images. A layer has attributes, such as shape, color, transparency, and size, just as an image does. A layer can contain any number of images, and when you create a layer, you can name it and give it attributes. (To create a layer, see the sidebar "Creating a new layer and naming it"). Then you can work with the layer by adding, moving, and deleting it. After you've created and named a new layer, you can also use filters to change the way that you view the images on that layer. (To add and change the attributes of a layer, see "Editing a layer's appearance," later in this chapter.) Photoshop has lots of predefined filters that you can use to make every image look like something different. Here are some of Photoshop's most popular filters and what they do to your photos: Camera Raw: Photoshop includes the Camera Raw plug-in, which is a great way to open your camera's raw files. Raw files are much like raw film; they don't have a developed, photographic image. As long as you use the right techniques, you can turn raw files into developed, printable images. See the sidebar "Opening camera raw files" for more information on this subject. Exposure: This filter changes the brightness of your photo. You can enhance the overall brightness of an image, change the shadows and highlights, or make the image look warmer or cooler by changing the color temperature of the image. Gradient: This filter allows you to change the tonal values of an image across the full span of the image. This is an especially great effect for making a photo look like it's made of a single color. Levels: This filter changes the overall brightness and contrast of an image, allowing you to make an image look brighter or darker. You can also change the hue of the image to desaturate or intensify color. Noise: The Noise filter can be used to create visual texture in your images, or you can create a softer, more blended version of the image. Other filters include Blur, Burn, Chroma Key, Dewarp, Emboss, Grad

This tutorial will introduce you to Photoshop Elements in action, through the process of making a complicated multi-layer image, finishing it off with a few of its visual effects. As you make your way through, you'll learn more about the elements of digital photography, graphic design and web design. Learn how to work with layers, adjustments layers, masks, brushes and colour in Photoshop Elements. Step 1: Create a New Document First, choose the type of document you wish to make. You have the option of: The standard sized document, which is 8.5" x 11". It creates a 900 x 1250 pixel resolution document. The photo print size, which creates a 6" x 9" output. The resolution will be the size of the document, but will increase with your photo print size. The standard document is the default option for new documents. Under the Format menu you have a square canvas. This will convert to a square canvas with the default size of your new document. If you wish to have your image stretch to the full length of the new document, you can choose a tall portrait setting. Step 2: Create a New Layers Click on the New button from the top menu to create a new layer. The New Layer dialog box will appear. Click on the Color menu. Check the box next to White. Click OK to add this layer to your file. Step 3: Create a New Layer A new layer is created when you press and hold the OK button. Tick the box next to White. You'll notice a grey box appear around your image - this box indicates the area you cannot work on. If you want to add any extra areas to your file you can create a new layer and repeat the process. Click on the New button from the top menu to create a new layer. Add a new layer next to the White layer and tick the box next to White. Use the Brush to add any colours to the white areas. This will create more work for you, so try to add the correct colours first. Once you've created the basic colour with the brush, press Enter and move on. You can see that the white areas have filled up with colours. The fill tool is placed underneath your brush. Press Alt to deselect 388ed7b0c7

The Lion Hunt The Lion Hunt is an episode of the British sitcom, Dinnerladies. The episode aired on 14 January 2008. The episode sees all the girls at work go on a mysterious prank call to the women's toilets at the Debenhams department store in Holborn, London. Synopsis The episode opens with Clare showing April and her friend Caroline a video of The Lion Hunt that she had seen on her laptop. The girls decide to go out for a drink after work, but are advised to wait for the group to get back so they can go out with them. While waiting, April is feeling rather jumpy due to her unsuccessful attempt at following the girls the previous day, and feels grateful that the toilet is now locked from the inside. While in the toilet, April is troubled by flashing lights from the shop across the road, but the lights are soon revealed to be one of the girls taking a photo of herself. Although the girls are supposed to be going on a'spree' for the day, they seem less forthcoming with their motives as the day progresses. A little while later, when the girls are actually going out, most of them manage to avoid April and Caroline, except for Sophie, who is the sister of Pauline. Sophie manages to pull the other two along with her to a security guard's van, where they are subjected to a number of pranks, including drinking a urine sample, having their tongues poked with a corkscrew, and having a urine-soaked snake rubbed against their faces. The girls are eventually discovered by a store assistant, who sends them back to the ladies' toilet, and April is the last to discover them. The episode then shifts focus to April, who is looking through her day planner trying to figure out what she will be doing on her week off. As she lays out her plans, she notices Pauline and Sophie's phone number scribbled in her calendar. She then calls them, asking them if she can come along with them on the prank, which she does not expect them to agree to. Nevertheless, the trio arrive at the women's toilets. They find that there is no need to go through the store from the ladies' toilet, as it is known to be manned by women, and it will therefore be easy to enter. However, once in the ladies' toilet, they find a locked door on the inside of the toilet cubicle. April opens the door and finds a group of four women,

Q: CakePHP 1.3 to 1.4 migration issue I am working on the migration of one of our application and have run into an error that's driving me crazy. What I have done: 1.3 to 1.4 application-2.0.2.php to application-1.4.0.php I have made sure that the database structure is the same as the new application and that my sqlite database file is in the same place (i have some intermediate config file to make sure that i can run the mysql version). The error I am getting is: Table 'blog_images' doesn't exist in database: SELECT COUNT(*) FROM `blog_images` I have searched a lot to see the proper way to handle this and I am almost certain I am overlooking something obvious. Below is what I've tried so far with no success: Looking at the models in the new application and comparing them to my model (1.3) and they are the same, so that's good. I have disabled all plugins in the new application and it doesn't seem to make any difference. I have commented out some core plugin code (like a call to the EventManager and the AuthManager) and the migration keeps running into errors, so that's bad. Anybody have a good idea what else I can do to make this migration work? Here are the errors: ==> EventManager: Migration aborted! Error: Could not determine query information! ==> AuthManager: Migration aborted! Error: Could not determine query information! ==> App: Migration aborted! Error: Could not determine query information! A: I would also recommend that you re-create the tables manually, otherwise you might potentially make a mistake when creating them, or possibly clash with existing data. It's probably best to create fresh tables before writing any data. This is especially important if you are migrating from one database engine to another, such as from MySQL to SQLite. If you are having problems with the EventManager, AuthManager and App plugins then you should be able to disable them in the migration by setting $base = null. These three plugins will be loaded in their own file using require, and if you don't use $base they won't be able to work. When I started migrations, I would disable all plugins before
